第一节 One possible version:

Dear fellows,

A new column for the graduating students called “My school, I have something to say to you” is set up in our school newspaper. We are expecting your theme-related articles.

We set no limit to the type—poems, essays, or novels are all welcome. Your contributions should cover your authentic experiences in your school life and genuine feelings that you want to extend. They are expected to be original and within 300 words. Please submit your articles before May 20th to EnglishNewspaper@sina.com. Works chosen, you will get a certificate and 200 yuan in prize money.

Write down your stories and keep your cherished memory alive. Looking forward to your works!

第二节 One possible version:

Soon after, all the negative words started to destroy me. I cried myself to sleep late in the night and woke up with swollen eyes the next morning, hardly able to get out of my room. Several days later, overwhelmed by depression, I refused to go to school and talk with someone and even refused food. It seemed that I was totally trapped in darkness. Thankfully, the magazines at hand helped to relieve my stress somehow. Everything changed from that day, when I happened to read an article.

I saw a quote in the journal. “Once you choose your way of life, be brave to stick it out and never return.” Reading it, I suddenly caught what it meant. I could either let myself down in the gossip or hug it as a chance to grow up and become better. So I reread the posts and reflected on my recent experiences. I realized that I was bothered because I cared so much about people’s bad comments that I lost heart and forgot my target. It’s time to face the situation bravely and stick to what I have always dreamed to do.

Text 1

W: We haven’t seen much of you lately in the hospital. Have you been away on business?

M: No, I’ve been away on holiday with my family.

Text 2

W: You can change planes in either Chicago or Denver.

M: You mean there’s no direct flight from New York to Phoenix?

Text 3

M: Those tickets on Tuesday are so expensive. Can’t you find anything better before Friday?

W: Well, if we want cheaper tickets, we have to leave on Thursday.

Text 4

W: Oh, don’t throw that away!

M: Why not? It’s been used already.

W: You can get a new label and put it on top of the old address, and then you can buy a bigger stamp and put it on top of the old stamp.

M: Good idea!

Text 5

M: Can I borrow your biology textbook? Mine was gone when I went back in the classroom.

W: That happened to me once. I’d almost given up on finding it until I checked it at the information desk downstairs in the lobby.

M: Oh, good idea.

Text 6

W: Is university pretty much what you expected, Sam?

M: Well, ⑥ I've been here two months now and I'm just getting used to it, really. It's certainly not easy. In fact, the workload is more than I expected. I've got to do loads of reading, for example.

W: How do you find the lectures?

M: Well, ⑦ the professors are great speakers and they know how to hold your interest. I've never been bored.

Text 7

M: You just said ⑧ you're interested in our position of production manager. Do you have experience in this position?

W: Yes, I've worked in a similar position for three years.

M: Could you tell me about some of your achievements from your previous job?

W: Well, I made full use in my job of what I had learned in university and, since my work was satisfactory, I was promoted to be a team leader after only one year. With our team's hard work, ⑨ we were able to reduce production costs by 15%, 3% more than your company's goal for the coming year.

M: Great! Could you tell me about your educational background?

W: Of course. I have a bachelor's degree in management from Peking University.

M: Hmm, not bad. I wonder how much you know about our company.

W: ⑩ I've visited your company's website. I know that your company is one of the Global 500 and the company's stock price has increased by 10% recently because of its outstanding performance.

M: OK, thank you. We'll call you in a week if we would like to hire you.

W: Thank you very much.

Text 8

W: Hi! It's nice to see you. Where have you been these days?

M: I went to Beijing for business. ⑪ I left last week on Wednesday and returned yesterday morning. Because it was Friday yesterday and the manager wasn't going to work on the weekend, ⑫ I had to spend the whole day preparing a report about my Beijing business trip. I worked on it until I got a headache, but ⑬ I finished the report in time to send to the manager just half an hour before the end of the workday.

W: No wonder you're looking so tired. You've been working much too hard.

M: True. That's why I came here to the park to relax a bit.

W: How was your business in Beijing?

M: I could say it was a success — I was able to return earlier than I'd planned. I had thought my trip would last two weeks and I would have to spend Christmas alone.

W: Congratulations! I hope you can enjoy yourself now. ⑬ Let's get together sometime.

M: OK. Goodbye!

Text 9

W: We're looking for someone to sell our new software products internationally. The job requires independence and ⑭ most importantly, a pleasant manner with customers.

M: I agree...that's important. I've worked in sales for years and have always tried to really listen to my customers to find out what they need. I think I'm really good at it.

W: That's great. What about your experience with software programs?

M: Well, I've trained people how to use a similar software product for the past two years at my current job, so I really feel I know the product.

W: Hmm...interesting, and your sales experience?

M: I've been with my present company for four years and ⑮ in my present position since two years ago. During that time, ⑯ I've been named salesperson of the month three times, and have taken top sales awards several times as well.

W: ⑰ Impressive...

Women like shopping, me included of course. I used to shop with my friends almost every week. ⑱ But this year I decided to try to go for a year without shopping for clothes. I have to say it has been really hard. But I don't want to give up. ⑲ So why did I decide to do that?

First, it's about money. Last year, being tired of doing the work I disliked, I left my highly-paid job and found a job that doesn't pay that much. But I was still spending a lot of money on clothes. As a result, I didn't have any savings. I decided to spend less on clothes.

Second, I already have a lot of clothes. ⑳ According to a study, most women wear only 20-30% of their clothes. A year without shopping for clothes gave me a chance to wear the clothes that I haven't tried before. I wasn't buying any new clothes, but I still had many new clothes to wear.

Third, I have less time for shopping than before. Now I'm trying to lose some weight, ②0so I go to the gym with friends on the weekend. If I were going shopping, I'd have no time to go to the gym.
